Imbasa Safari News – November 2012

First week of new Ownership

It is with great excitement that we took over this week at Imbasa Safari. Richard & Hanna left us with a very good foundation to work from and our sincerest thanks to them. Imbasa Safari is now under the proud ownership of close friends and business partners, Pieter Dry and Godfried Thiar and wives, Samantha and Lynette.

We had the privilege to welcome our first guests from Sweden on Thursday. Shortly after their arrival we experienced our first Kalahari thunder storm at Imbasa and had some of the first rain for the season. This resulted in all the watering holes being full and we were serenaded by the frog and cricket choirs at night. Among other hunting, our guests managed to find the trophy zebra they were looking for on Sunday morning.

As new owners, our aim at Imbasa is to introduce a wider variety of species as well as to introduce and breed some threatened and protected species. This will enable us in the future to make available some of these sought after trophies for hunting. Keep a lookout for our progress in future correspondence.

We hope that we will have the privilege to to meet you at some stage at Imbasa.

Imbasa Safari Greetings.
